Frontline Freelance Mexico and the Resilience Fund of the Global Initiative Against Transnational Organized Crime (GI-TOC) invite you to the presentation of the Fixing Journalism project.

As a result of an investigation that included thirty-five testimonials from journalists who have worked as fixers in Mexico, the dynamics of an unequal collaboration between local journalists and international correspondents become evident.

Mexico is one of the most dangerous countries in the world for the press, and local journalists generally face greater risks by living in the same high-risk areas where they work as fixers. With the launch of this guide and website, the Fixing Journalism project calls on international media and correspondents to reconsider their relationships with fixers in Mexico and other parts of the world.
